Last week, when I reviewed the software, I did my best to illustrate the new Photoshop and Adobe Lightroom features. But the dramatic improvements lie in the hardware and the software that Adobe has created. The beauty of Photoshop software lies in the fact that it can accommodate any image format, but since it is a digital format, a digital format, it requires a digital format. Sometimes you want to be able to track who responded to a specific comment, so it's helpful to be able to attach names to comments. With this release, you can now select comments and specific participants and attach their names. When you open a file in Photoshop, you'll see "Layers" and "Image & Presets" panels on the right side of the application. If you select "Image & Presets," there's an option called "View comments" in the bottom-right corner of the panel. From here, you'll have a list of comments. You can see who commented on any comment by clicking on the person's name. This will open a dialog to the right where you'll be able to edit or delete that person's comments. You'll also see if there are any additional comments, which you can't edit. You can also toggle the visibility of comments by going to the Comments panel. From here, you can see the comments you can see by clicking on the "See More..." button, which is located at the bottom-right corner. This button checks to see if comments have been added through the Comments panel. If you go back to the dialog where you can edit or remove comments, you'll see specific comments that were added to the file. You can cancel changes to those comments from this dialog.
